

Please tell the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB), to kindly run off a cliff. They are making an obviously desperate move to try to retain some of their dying market share in the AM/FM radio business. With the invention of satellite radio, which is technologically superior to AM/FM band radio, and has the added bonus of no government censorship, people are flocking to it in droves.

If the NAB doesn't like that they are offering local information to listeners now, TOUGH! This is America. We have freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and we have an open market system. Supply and demand determines what a company will offer. If the NAB is so concerned about AM/FM listeners switching to Satellite, and getting local information on Satellite, then maybe the NAB should do something about the general crappiness that is AM/FM radio.

~Robert McAdams